

Dräger Fire Extinguisher Training

Participants learn how to operate portable fire extinguishers and react in an appropriate manner in emergency situations – all personnel involved have the opportunity to extinguish a live fire.

ST-3752-2007

Use of all standard types of fire extinguisher.

ST-6938-2005

Wide range of props for simulating different types of fire.

TARGET GROUP

Business operators – from industrial, and manufacturing to offices and hotels – wherever the risk of fire is present and safety measures are implemented

CONTENTS

The course is designed to teach participants in the basic principles of combustion and extinguishment. It shows them how different types of fire extinguishers are used to deal with different types of fire. Practical instruction is provided in the handling of all industry norm fire extinguisher types (e.g. powder, foam, water, CO<sub>2</sub>), and in tactical aspects of tackling many different kinds of anticipated fire scenarios. Additional demonstrations including an aerosol can and chip pan fire can be provided upon request.

FEATURES/CONTENTS

- Academic and practical instruction tailored to the needs of the client company
- Use of a patented, simulated water extinguisher
- Realistic simulation of A, B and C class fires

- Effective training: participants can undertake multiple attempts to extinguish the fire until success is achieved
- Due to the remote-controlled fire area successful extinguishing can be monitored realistically
- Short set-up times – extinguishers are refilled automatically after each extinguishing attempt
- Inexpensive, environmentally acceptable and residue-free
- Mobile training gallery
- Up to 120 participants can be trained each day

REQUIREMENTS

- Seminar room
- Suitable external training area (15 x 15 m)
- Water source, at least 4 bar
- Power source

A tailored package can be produced upon request. The Dräger mobile training gallery allows you to deliver the training course on site rather than participants travelling to a remote training location. This strategy is also suited to companies with multiple sites.
