

Information about the training certificate

For our classroom courses, participants receive a training certificate. In this document, you will find answers to frequently asked questions relating to the certificate.

What is a training certificate?

A training certificate is a document certifying that the holder has taken a specific course of training.

Our training certificates are not to be considered as actual certifications. They serve as proof that the person has taken a specific seminar, documenting the fact that the person has undergone that specific training.

What is the difference between training and certification?

Courses in general help to learn, grow and build a person's skills (training). A certification authenticates and validates your skills and is issued for qualifying trainings according to a national or international standard.

Why does my training certificate have a time limited validity?

Dräger training certificates have a time limited validity in order to ensure that the participant maintains skills and possesses updated knowledge for that particular area and based on international standards.

My training certificate has expired and there are no trainings available for the next 6 months. Do I need a dispensation?

Since the training certificate is not a certification, a dispensation is not relevant.

Dispensations for the qualifying courses (e.g. OPITO-courses) cannot be granted.
